...Network Analysis, Inc. Hires Agency for Public Relations Support

Mission Viejo, Calif. – March 26, 2007 – St. Conti Communications today announces that it has agreed to provide public relations support for Network Analysis, Inc. of Chandler, Ariz. Work began in January with a primary focus on raising awareness for Network Analysis, Inc. products — especially SINDA/G thermal analysis software — among a highly select audience of design engineers within the aerospace, automotive and electronics industries.

“We are pleased to work with a talent like Donna St. Jean Conti and her team,” said Scott Hanratty, director of marketing for Network Analysis, Inc. “I worked with Donna when I was the vice president of marketing for MCS, Inc., a computer-aided design, engineering and manufacturing software company. She was able to garner great exposure for MCS’ products, and I expect she’ll do even more with Network Analysis’ software.”

To start, projects will include ongoing media relations, news releases and collateral writing as well as placement of applications stories.

About Network Analysis, Inc.

Network Analysis, Inc. (NAI) was founded in 1982 to develop, market, and support thermal analysis software. Building on the foundation laid by its founder Jerry Gaski, NAI continues to extend the capabilities of SINDA/G through innovative development under the leadership of its president, Ron Behee.
