Public Relations Agency St. Conti Communications Expands to Silicon Valley

...High-technology, green technology and nonprofits publicity team provides regional, national and international support.

Morgan Hill, Calif. – June 30, 2009 – St. Conti Communications, a virtual public relations and marketing communications agency, today announces that its headquarters have moved to Silicon Valley from South Orange County, Calif. The company was established in 1997 by its president, Donna St. Jean Conti, to make the most of Internet-based technologies and pass on the savings to companies seeking publicity support. Its associates have extensive experience supporting high-technology and green technology clients, including software, peripherals and components companies. St. Conti Communications moved its headquarters to Morgan Hill in May while maintaining offices in Orange County and San Francisco, Calif., as well as Fredericton, New Brunswick, via its network of associates. Now, high-technology, green technology and nonprofit organizations based in Silicon Valley that prefer face-to-face contact can turn to St. Conti Communications for publicity support.

"It's great to be in Silicon Valley, in the heart of where so many technological innovations are made," said St. Jean Conti. "St. Conti Communications is ready to provide public relations and marketing communications support to large and small companies based here and elsewhere. My team and I also support larger public relations agencies by filling in on projects or ongoing programs where assigning a full-time staffer doesn't make sense."

St. Conti Communications provides integrated strategic programs and project-based support that includes news release development, article development, traditional and social media relations, tradeshow support and collateral creation in addition to other services. Its past and present clients list includes startups as well as Fortune 500 companies based throughout the United States, Canada and as distant as New Zealand. Recent client testimonials are posted on the company's new Web site at www.StContiCommunications.com/testimonials.

Though most of its clients offer high-technology and green technology products and services, St. Conti Communications also supports environmentally oriented nonprofit organizations by assisting with media relations and event publicity support targeted to coincide with fundraising efforts.

St. Conti Communications is a virtual agency that includes a team of associates who work from separate offices, each of whom has 10-plus years of experience in her or his specialty.

To celebrate the agency's expansion to its new location, St. Conti Communications has rolled out an updated logo that depicts a successful professional using a laptop to communicate while a cat lounges at her feet, indicating that this person operates successfully outside the traditional office setting.
